

Mary Kelly Marsco started with the IEC Western Reserve in September of 2015, serving as a grant writer to the Executive Director. From the very beginning, her work ethic, skills and positive energy made her a great fit for our Chapter. She was given the opportunity to become the Training Director in June of 2016, and as of May 2017 is currently serving as the Executive Director. In this short amount of time, she has wholeheartedly committed to both the day to day business of serving as Executive Director and supporting a strong apprentice program. She believes the Western Reserve's school is an essential part of developing and training the future of the electrical industry. Mary has played an important role in community outreach for the Chapter, working to develop and foster relationships with local schools and leaders. She also collaborated with Board members and a marketing team to help design a new logo for the Western Reserve Chapter. Mary is dedicated to seeing growth of membership and apprentices. Mary's past experience working for nonprofits and libraries made her very passionate about connecting people to resources and information and serving as Executive Director is the perfect conduit to put these skills to use. Deeply invested in the future of the Western Reserve Chapter, Mary is excited to work towards more growth while looking to the future.
